Hydrocarbon School on for February 2022

Now that the oil and gas industry has settled down from the roller coaster ride that was 2020, the CCAMS Board of Directors met (in person!) and decided to move forward with planning for the 2022 CCAMS Hydrocarbon Measurement School. The date has been set for February 22-23, 2022 at the Omni Bayfront Hotel. More details will be posted to the CCAMS website, such as student and exhibitor information, so check for updates at: www.ccams.info We can't wait to see you there!

Volunteer to teach a class at 2022 School

As always, CCAMS needs volunteers for instructional classes for the upcoming Hydrocarbon Measurement School. If you would like to share your know-how with others, the School needs you. Think you don't have enough for a full class? Team up with a colleague and teach a class together. If you think you might be interested, e-mail us at: ccams2013@yahoo.com.

The CCAMS Board has decided to hold the annual Hydrocarbon Measurement School next year on February 22 and 23, 2022 at the Omni Bayfront Hotel in Corpus Christi.

Student funds go out, next hydrocarbon school planned

Last year, siding with public health officials' advice for COVID-19, the CCAMS Board of Directors made the difficult decision to cancel the 2021 Hydrocarbon Measurement School. CCAMS was not alone, as many industry conferences and meetings had canceled, too.

Unsure of what 2021 had in store, the Board met this past spring to decide whether it was going to be able to award student scholarships. It was the first of two major decisions this year: could the Society hand out scholarships as in so many years past and could the School be held in the spring of 2022? Fortunately, the Society had been built to weather just Continued on page 2

Scholarship Spotlight

Hailing from San Antonio, Texas, Carolina “Nina” Alvarez recently began her college studies at her d r e a m school, the University of Texas at Austin. Nina is pursuing a degree in Government in the hopes of eventually going on to law school.

She tells us that currently she is involved with the First-Year Leadership committee of UT Student Government and is working as an intern for a candidate for a Travis County commissioner.

“My college experience so far has been amazing, and the CCAMS board and members have helped make that possible,” Nina said. “Thank you so much for giving me the opportunity to attend the school of my dreams and study my passions.”

such a storm, and the Board found that there were enough funds available to offer scholarships for the 2021-22 academic year.

The second question came in light of the sea of uncertainty that the pandemic produced - Texas already had seen a third wave of coronavirus infections this past summer. But conditions had begun to improve as people learned to live with the new norm. Other industry conferences were back on and life was beginning to look familiar again. Health officials predicted a rosier picture for 2022.

As a result, the Board unanimously decided to hold the School on February 22-23, 2022.. Additionally, the Board of Directors is proud to announce the CCAMS scholarship recipients for the 2021-2022 academic year. This year’s CCAMS Scholarship recipients are:
